Grocery stores

'Sale' prices elusive

By ROLF KOECHER
and
COLLEEN HENDRICHSEN

"This item on sale!", the familiar slogan from many Provo area stores, might more accurately be translated to read, "This item for sale. No bargain intended."

Dazzling signs, special displays and sale offers don't always mean that a price reduction has been made; in fact, the "special" sign can sometimes even mask an increase in price. The customer cannot always depend solely on outward appearances of signs and advertisements, but should carefully read their message, for in more than one instance specially marked or sale items were either higher in price than they had been or showed no change, according to a recent Daily Universe survey.

Provo shoppers pay a higher price for added store conveniences according to a recent survey.

The survey was conducted at nine local grocery stores on a list of 25 randomly selected items including national brands, produce and dairy products. The survey was repeated three times in each store to insure accuracy and allow observation of consumer conditions.

Among the items surveyed, the price difference between the store found highest and the store found lowest was only $1.26 on approximately $13 worth of groceries. Most stores, while showing definite differences, were found to be within a few cents of each other and well within the $1.26 maximum range.

A number of Provo merchants admitted that they are often forced to sell certain products normally at below their cost, but that these could be advertised as sale items without further price reduction since the price charged was still lower than actual cost or normal retail value of the good. One grocer said that since 25 per cent of all items account for approximately 80 per cent of sales, many stores actually sell some of these fast-moving items at below profit levels because it attracts buyers and builds repeat customers.

However, selling for less than cost is in violation of state statutes, according to Dr. M. Dallas Burnett, BYU Professor of Communications Law. "There is a Utah law that prohibits a retailer from selling at less than six per cent above his cost," he said. This is to prevent the smaller store owner from becoming the victim of cutthroat competition, unable to sustain continued below-profit sales that the larger store can absorb into its costs.

MANY OF THE merchants, however, felt the law was unfair, making its violation mandatory to keep in competition with other grocers. A certain brand of mayonnaise, for instance, normally costing most grocers 74 cents per quart, actually retails in most stores at or even below that price—well below the six per cent profit margin.

Every sign encountered inside a supermarket must not be interpreted as indicating a reduction in price. Many stores advertise certain items at their regular price or display them prominently to promote the good but do not carry untruthful promises of savings.

Lee Collard, manager of Reams, explained that "a sale doesn't really have to mean that the item is below cost." He added that often items marked or advertised will be spotlighted to increase their sales or to get people acquainted with the product.

Collard also mentioned the popular misconception that Reams' marked prices were wholesale costs, with the added 10 per cent surcharge being the store's profit. He said this was not the case, but that marked prices were actually adjusted to be under wholesale charges, and that with the added 10 per cent they never exceed suggested retail prices.

EVEN THOUGH many stores are bound by their costs, many individual items can show a great amount of fluctuation. The survey showed that cucumbers on the very same evening were six cents each in one market whereas they sold for 20 cents in another—a price difference of over three times the cost in the first store. Cranberry sauce also showed a low of 26 cents and a high of 33 cents from among the surveyed stores.

Each store will have special prices on individual items, making it the cheapest market in town on a particular product. At the same time, even the most inexpensive stores carry a number of goods at higher prices than do many of the more costly markets.

Some items may vary greatly from store to store, even among those belonging to the same company. While both stores were comparable on many items, Warshaw's in Orem offered a cake mix for 37 cents while its store near campus sold the same item for 49 cents.

The geographical location of stores in relation to the campus appears to have no effect on prices.

Three days of voting

Polls open today for final round

Voting begins today in the ELWC Reception Center for the ASBYU final elections. Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Polls will also be open Wednesday and Thursday, but will close at 6 p.m. on Thursday.

Students will vote for ten candidates for ASBYU offices as well as vote for the Belle of the Y. There are six final contestants in the Belle of the Y competition.

Students will also cast a vote in a mock national election. The choice on the ballot will be between Republicans Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew and Democrats George Wallace and Wilbur Mills. These four won the mock national presidential primary held last week in conjunction with ASBYU primary elections.

IN THE Daily Universe survey conducted over the weekend, it was learned the 40 per cent of prospective voters plan to vote for Bill Fillmore in the ASBYU Presidential race, 27 per cent for Cam Caldwell and 33 per cent are "undecided."

A breakdown of Fillmore and Caldwell voters showed that 37 per cent of Caldwell supporters' decision were influenced by personal contact with the candidate. Twenty-nine per cent of Fillmore backers indicated "personal contact" with the candidate as "the most influential factor" in their decision to vote for Fillmore.

IN RESPONSE to the question, "Do you know what the campaign issue 'correlation' means?" 46 per cent said no, 37 per cent said yes and 17 per cent "vaguely." Further breakdown showed that of those who claimed to know what "correlation" means, 55 per cent plan to vote for Fillmore, 21 per cent for Caldwell and 24 per cent undecided.

THE SURVEY showed that students unfamiliar with the meaning of the campaign issue "correlation" were generally undecided in their plans to vote. 41 per cent of those unacquainted with "correlation" were undecided, while 30 per cent said they planned to vote for Fillmore and 29 per cent for Caldwell.

Students were also asked "For what purpose would you like to see the Social Office profits of $14,000 be used?" fifty-two per cent responded in favor of putting it in the student library fund, 21 per cent favored free student activities and 27 per cent indicated other channels (most of which included a combination of the two).

THIS CONTRASTED with a survey taken earlier this month by the ASBYU Social Office of 895 students at a dance. The survey showed that 64 per cent favored using profits for free student activities, 19 per cent favored using the funds for the student library fund, and 17 per cent favored both.

Elder Tuttle

Elder Tuttle speaks today at Devotional

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of the Seventy will speak in Devotional at 10 a.m. in the Smith Fieldhouse. Overflow areas will be provided.

Elder Tuttle has served on the Council since April 10, 1958. From 1961 to 1965 he was president of the missions in South America with headquarters in Uruguay. He now supervises South American mission activities from Salt Lake City.

Born in Mantu, Utah, Elder Tuttle is a 1943 BYU graduate. He earned a master's degree from Stanford University and has done graduate work at the University of Utah.

Density tests affect parking

Parking will be getting just a little tighter in the lot east of the ELWC Wednesday, and Thursday and Friday of the week.

A drilling team will be making tests of the ground density on the lot as a first step in the planning of the Law School Bldg. reported Sven Nielsen, chief of BYU Security.

According to Nielsen, enough spaces for a truck and drilling equipment will be set aside.

"It won't hurt much," remarked Nielsen.

"Smoking grass causes cancer," said Sophomore Spider Henderson.

Right or wrong, Henderson is part of a majority of BYU students who are against legalization of marijuana. Some 82 per cent of the students polled opposed "decriminalization." An even 16 per cent thought marijuana should be legalized, and the rest were undecided.

Proponents of legalization said that many users of the drug do so only because "it's against the establishment."

"If marijuana were legalized, the rate of users might drop," said one student. "A lot of kids are using it now just to defy the law."

"PEOPLE ought to make their own decisions," said another. "They're going to sneak behind the law and try it anyway. You can't keep a tight enough hold on it."

"Everything else is legal. Why not marijuana?" said sophomore Erik Erikson. He compared the legalization of marijuana to legalization of alcohol. Prohibition, he said, only "made things worse."

Several students said they didn't see anything wrong with marijuana.

"I don't see any harm in it," said one girl. "It's no worse than cigarettes or alcohol. They smoke it anyway. I don't see what good the law does."

One girl was definitely in favor of legalization, for personal reasons.

"Legalize it!" she said. "That

Detecting the pulse of BYU students concerning the legalization of marijuana were Universe reporters Barbara Black, Rolf Kroeher, Karen Southwick and Don Wesel.

way I won't get pinched."

One student favored legalization with the use of "grass centers" scattered across country.

"If it was legalized and controlled, kids who wanted to could, say, go to a grass center and try the stuff," he said. "Then there would no longer be a need for pushers who are pushing harder stuff. The competition with marijuana would drive them out of business."

Many of those who opposed legalization did so because of younger kids who "couldn't put it in the right perspective as well as we older kids can."

"I don't think 97 per cent of the people can handle it," said Rack Duran.

Melanie Miller, a junior, said she would vote against it because "if it were legal and I were younger and more foolish, I'd be a lot more willing to try it than I would be if it were illegal."

"Adults can make up their own minds about it, but kids don't have the common sense to do the right thing," added James Fager.

THE 85 PER CENT of the students who were against legalization of marijuana were largely so because of Church reasons.

James Martin said he was against it because of "beliefs of the Word of Wisdom. My friends have used it, and I find they can't concentrate on a simple conversation," he added. "Their minds wander easily. I believe it has a definite psychological effect on people."

"I don't know why I really don't know," said David Watkins, a freshman. "I guess the objection has been with me all my life. It's part of my background. I'm definitely opposed."

Isaboun Bill Hammond tried to put himself in Christ's place. "I don't think the Saviour would legalize it," he said.

"You know," he added, "a society that would ban cyclamates and legalize marijuana is slightly off base."

Narcotics crackdown

Declaring the control of narcotics traffic the nation's "No. 1 priority" for law enforcement in his administration President Richard Nixon yesterday vowed to give "no sympathy whatever" for the drug pusher.

"When you find a person who is destroying the lives of young people, there isn't any excuse for such a person," Nixon said at a meeting marking the opening of the New York Regional Office of Drug Abuse Law Enforcement.

Making a special point of separating drug pushers from users, Nixon said he felt sympathy for those caught in the web of drug abuse, but that "I don't want anyone to get the idea we should have leniency in the field. The emphasis should be to get at the pushers."

Capital punishment

The U.S. Supreme Court refused yesterday to block from taking effect a California Supreme Court ruling overturning the death penalty in that state, rejecting a request by the state attorney general to keep the measure from going into effect pending appeal.

California court observers said that since the ruling was permitted to take effect, the 103 men and five women on death row would receive a reduction in their sentences to life imprisonment and could not be re-sentenced even if the U.S. Supreme Court eventually reversed the California decision.

Swallows return

More than 40,000 persons, bundled against the early morning chill and light drizzle, let out the traditional roar when the bells of San Luis Capistrano Mission sounded the return of the swallows from their annual winter migration to Argentina.

The bells tolled at 7:47, 23 a.m. Sunday when the first contingent of 500 appeared out of the overcast, marking the end of their 3,000-mile journey. More than 100,000 persons crowded into the mission village before the day was over.

Illinois primary

While the leading contenders finished their Illinois efforts, Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson plus New York mayor John V. Lindsay campaigned across the border in nearby Wisconsin, seeking to build support for the April 4 primary showdown with Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

Johnson

Johnson earns teacher award

Attempts to pay individual attention to students have garnered honors for a education professor.

Dr. Richard W. Johnson of the College of Education will be presented with the Professor of the Month Award today in Devotional by the Blue Key Honor Fraternity.

Johnson currently teaches in the Dept. of Educational Psychology and works in BYU's Counseling Center. When asked about the methods he employs to help better classes, Johnson mentioned that "perhaps the most important aspect would be the attempt to create a one-to-one rapport with each student so that each feels like an individual rather than a number."

Forms for student nomination are available in the ASBYU Academics Office.

Oaks endorses

Library fund solicited by phone

President Dallin Oaks gave endorsement yesterday to student efforts to solicit funds for the library via telephone.

The endorsement referred to a project directed by Cam Caldwell in which every BYU student will be contacted by telephone as urged to pledge donations for the library addition.

"I wholeheartedly endorse this student 'telefund,'" Oaks stated. "I hope that when our students are contacted by telephone they will be as generous as their circumstances permit. For example, if each student were to donate $4.00, the student goal of $100,000 would be met, and the attainment of this goal by student subscriptions would give enormous impetus to our fundraising efforts with other donors," he added.

Beginning today, BYU students will be contacted by other students in an effort to raise at least $10,000 for the Student Library Fund.

The project, directed by Cam Caldwell, has been conceived to give students the same opportunity to donate to the library that alumni have donated to the University after they graduate.

"Most students aren't aware that their tuition pays for only about a third of the costs of their education," commented Caldwell. "With the Church Education Program growing so rapidly there is an increasing need for alumni and students to help cover the rising costs of an education at BYU," he added.

Steve Brinson, director of the recruitment phase of the project, indicated it was coordinated with words and stakes and that "we will have two sets of fifty callers calling other students from 6 to 11 p.m." until March 31.

Termining the project the "number one building priority on campus," Oaks said he was "thrilled" with student efforts in raising funds.

Manpower needed to vote for office of Women's V.P.

Men seem willing to vote for everything else.

But, according to voting records, BYU's men haven't been turning out to vote for ASBYU Vice President of Women's Activities.

"The Vice President of Women's Activities sits on the Executive Council and makes decisions which affect the entire student body—not merely female students," said Mary Wilson, ASBYU Women's Vice President. The Women's Lib President is one of ten voices on the Council. According to Miss Wilson she must be familiar with such things as the Women's Lib movement, the role of the LDS woman in the family and community, and the general activities of the ASBYU. Miss Wilson and her successor will travel to Chicago at the end of the month to attend the Intercollegiate Associated Women's Students National Convention. Funds for the trip have been allocated by the Executive Council.

A proposal to permit only female students to vote for the office was recently defeated by the Council. Miss Wilson feels it is significant that male students be encouraged to vote for this office because of the chair it holds on the Executive Council and the student-wide decisions that group makes.

Dance Team can't defend title in May

The 18 students representing the World Champion Ballroom Dance Team have been turned down to defend their title in England this May.

Heber Wolsky, the assistant to the President in charge of communications, reported that the team was turned down for two reasons. First, the trip would have forced the students to miss five days of school and six days of final examinations. University policy prohibits students from missing more than six days of school.

Second, the team was scheduled to go to Hungary and Poland, countries behind the Iron Curtain, on a tour after the competition in England. BYU does not approve trips requiring students to go behind the Iron Curtain.

Academic regalia

Editor:
Now that the proposed library expansion has been accepted and various fund raising projects have been started, might I offer a suggestion for the coordination of the library fund committee as well as the student body? Last spring a survey was conducted concerning the continuation of the use of the traditional academic regalia at graduation. Though a very significant number of prospective graduates failed to vote, the survey indicated they wanted to continue using the cap and gown as opposed to donating the money to a worthy project. I feel perhaps the outcome stemmed from the fact that the alternative use of the funds was left unstated.

Each spring and summer, graduates as well as faculty are asked to spend from $4.00 to $10.00, depending upon one's department and degree, on robe rentals.

I'm not sure what the voice of this year's graduates would indicate, and it is not my purpose to ant tradition at difference to practicality, but perhaps many would feel their money better spent having donated to such a cause versus wearing the regalia. Without excess expense, thousands of dollars could be reclaimed and we could still maintain a very dignified though considerable more comfortable attire at graduation.

Water ecology

Editor:
Let's face it! Someday the water's going to run out or get so polluted we can't even use it. Want an example? According to the book ECOLOGY AT HOME, the Illinois Department of Public Health has proclaimed most every river and stream of the entire state too polluted for safe swimming. But most of us will shrug our shoulders and say "It can't happen here." Well, it can, if we don't do something about it. A slogan I read on the back of a Mormon float in a Solvang Christmas Parade, said "Peece begins at home." I suppose that applies to conservation just as well. In fact, that's what the word "ecology" means in its broadest sense—household knowledge (derived from the Greek root "oikos" for household). So, what can we do at home, then? We can save water whenever possible (just because the landlord's paying for it in most cases, doesn't mean we should waste the nation's water supply) and pollute water as little as possible.

Some General Suggestions:

- 1.—Never leave your water running unnecessarily, for example, while you are brushing your teeth or washing dishes. Turn it off and on as you need it.
- 2.—Make sure the water's off and doesn't drip when you leave the house. Get that landlord to fix the dripping faucets. He's under contractual agreement to do so.
- 3.—Wait for a full load on dishes and clothes (washes water, power, and soap pollution).
- 4.—Take shorter showers and shallower baths. Married couples, bathe your children together.
- 5.—Place a brick in your toilet tank; it will use less water.

Use it!

Editor:
Many opinions on hair and dress standards have been expressed lately and . . . we are no more valid than anyone else's. So instead of expressing my ideas I will express those of a good friend.

President Oaks indicated that there is nothing immoral about long hair in and of itself, but to present a good image before society we must for the present time cut our hair.

Jesus Christ said in Luke 16:15, "Ye are they which justify yourselves before men, but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly esteemed among men is a abomination in the sight of God."

Shall we continue to justify ourselves before man by cutting our hair or shall we begin to follow the teachings of the Savior.

Bruins best bet for NCAA title

With the best team in town and the finals being played in their own backyard, UCLA seems to be a "shoo-in" to garner their sixth straight national basketball crown.

Also gaining plane fare to Los Angeles for the finals are the Florida State Seminoles, the Tar Heels from North Carolina and the University of Louisville Cardinals.

In Thursday night's opening round, the Florida State live take on the Tar Heels of North Carolina. Both teams are nationally ranked and either could figure in the finale.

In what many feel will be the main event, UCLA, under head mentor John Wooden, squares off against Louisville, the winner of the Midwest regions.

Louisville is coached by Denny Crum, once assistant to Wooden at UCLA. "I am well acquainted with the UCLA material since I recruited several of their players," stated Crum.

Both coaches feel that the contest will be a run and shoot affair and when the smoke clears, bet on the Bruins.

Saturday night will see the first round losers play for consolation followed by the title tilt.

Stan Watts was coaching basketball at BYU long before most of the student body was born. BYU played 691 roundball games in the 23 years that Stan was head mentor, and the Cougars won 431 of them.

Stan's winning ways have been acclaimed throughout the nation, but his accomplishments become even more meaningful when one analyzes his strength in building a strong team effort.

SINCE the organization of the WAC 10 seasons ago, the Cougars have won or shared the loop crown five times. That's more than twice as many as any other club in the league, since UNM, ASU and Wyoming have all won or tied for the WAC honors two times each. UTEP and Utah have both won the loop championship once, while CSU and Arizona are yet to garner the WAC hoop honors.

The fact that is interesting about the comparison of conference titles is that BYU, with twice as many loop crowns as any other team, is only number three on the tally sheet of all-conference players.

In 10 years of WAC play, BYU has had nine first team all-WAC selections. Wyoming has placed 11 players on the all-conference list, while New Mexico has notched 10 first team picks.

The all-WAC totals show these results:

ALL WAC	(All Totals)	(Individuals)

WAC CHAMPIONSHIP WITH ALL WAC

1972 - BYU with 2 AB WAC
1971 - BYU with 1 AB WAC (2 from 3rd place Utah)
1970 - UTEP with 1 AB WAC (2 from 3rd place Wyoming)
1969 - BYU with some and Wyoming with 2
1968 - New Mexico with 1 (2 from 3rd place Wyoming)
1967 - BYU with 1 and Wyoming with 1 (2 from 3rd place New Mexico)
1966 - Utah with 1
1965 - BYU with 1
1964 - New Mexico with 1
1963 - Arizona State with 1

CHECKING the all-league lists, we see that Cougar teams have won five titles with good team efforts. Stan Watts has made effective use of his personnel to win ball games and tally post-season honors while other teams have done well as far as their individual stars are concerned, but have come up short in the win column.

In 1965, 1967 and 1971 the Cats won the title with only one all-WAC player. In 1969, the Blue cagers tied for the crown with no all conference picks, and this year is the first in BYU history that the Cougars have placed two players on the all-WAC first team list.

Analyzing these facts, it is apparent that Stan Watts did a great job with the available personnel. Stan's teams were well coached. He took the players and made them a team; not a group of hot shots, prima donnas or individuals, but a cohesive, winning team.

NOW that Glenn Potter has been named the new hoop head coach, I wonder what veteran assistant Pete Witbeck will be doing. Pete has been offered his old job but is undecided as yet about his future plans. I hope coach Witbeck will remain at BYU in some leadership capacity. His tenure at Cougarville spans the period of 16 years.

As head recruiter at BYU, he was instrumental in bringing Phil Tollestrup, Bernie Fryer, Brian Ambrozich, Belmont Anderson, Doug Richards, Dick Nemelka, Jeff Congdon, Steve Kramer, Craig Raymond, Jim Eskline, Neil Roberts, Gary Hill, Paul Rottner, Mike Gardner and many other great cagers to Provo. Here's hoping that Pete's talents will be used for many years to come at BYU.

The Marines don't want a lot of recruits—

We're looking for a few good men.

Mark Kleine — 375-1971

If everybody could be a Marine, we wouldn't be the Marines.

For almost two hundred years, we've kept our standards high and our ranks small.

Today it is harder than ever to be a Marine. We're a tough club to join, a tough team to make. And that's exactly the way we're going to keep it.

We want quality, not quantity.

We want men who are proud of their Country and want to serve it proudly.

We want men who seek a challenge and aren't afraid of tough physical training.

We want men who believe that while nobody likes to fight, somebody has to know how.

We want men who want to become part of an elite force of extraordinary men.

Or if you are a college man who is ready for leadership and responsibility...

If you've got it and you want to stand with the Marines, you'll be welcome.

We train our men the way we've always trained them.

No compromises. No shortcuts. No promises except one:

You'll be a Marine.

One of the few, and one of the finest.

The USMC Officer Selection Team is coming to BYU Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, March 21, 22, and 23, 9:30 to 2:30 ELWC Stepdown Lounge for the final screening for this summer's training program.

Defending champion New Mexico and persistent Arizona State are expected to meet for the Western Athletic Conference Gymnastics Championship at Tempe, Arizona, March 23-24-25. BYU draws the home role for the tournament, while Arizona, Colorado State and Utah should battle for fourth place, according to the pre-meet prospectus.

THE TEAM championship will be decided after compulsory on Thursday night and optional on Friday night. Saturday competition will be confined to the individual championships.

Winner of the WAC team title qualifies for the NCAA team championship, while the first three placers in the individual events are eligible to compete in the NCAA.

ARIZONA State established itself as a slim team favorite recently when it upset New Mexico, 161.05-159.10, in a dual meet at Tempe. But Sun Devil Coach Don Robinson isn't accepting the team trophy yet. Tradition rests with New Mexico. The Lobos have won the last two team crowns, as well as three of the last four, under Coach Rusty Mitchell. New Mexico boasts the only two returning individual champions in Fred Cardenas on the side horse and Ken Atkinson on the high bar.

Here are how the individual events generally shape up:

ALL-AROUND—Dave Repp of New Mexico, the defending titleholder, underwent an operation for a shoulder separation and is redshirting this year. The favorite, though, remains in the Lobo camp. That is Jim Ivick, who placed third last year. Brian Scott of Arizona State, Roger Haldeman of Utah, and Werner Hoeger of BYU should contend.

FLOOR EXERCISE—Storrey Eaton, the WAC and NCAA champion from New Mexico, has graduated. That leaves the favorite's role to fellow New Mexico star, Dana Shelley, who was second last year. Also back are the other four placers from 1971—Brian Scott of Arizona State (3rd), Pat Hattie of Arizona (4th), Myron Tucker of Arizona State (5th), and Haldeman of Utah (6th). But Shelley's toughest competition may come from a freshman, Gary Alexander of Arizona State.

SIDE HORSE—Fred Cardenas of New Mexico is the defending champion and must be considered the favorite. He won the ASI-UNM dual meet with a 9.15. Jim Allen of Colorado State upset Cardenas in an early dual meet. Mark Hopkins of New Mexico returns after placing fourth last year. Also challenging will be Brian Large of BYU, Guy Hogue of Utah, Freshman Steve Isham of Arizona State, and ASU's Bob Howard, who placed sixth in 1971.

STILL RINGS—The top three placers from 1971, including champion John Hughes of BYU, are gone. That leaves the favorite's tag to Dan Smith of Arizona

State, who placed fourth in 1971. New Mexico's Bob Chavez and Bill Parise ranked fifth and sixth last year. Mike Waller of Arizona State, Ron Crescenti of Colorado State, and Jim Ivick of New Mexico also are challengers.

LONG HORSE—Probably the most difficult event to diagnose. Mark Hopkins of New Mexico was runner-up to ASU's Dan Ryan last year and is the top returnee. Jim Ivick of the Lobos was third and also is back. Other leading contenders include Werner Hoeger and Wayne Young of BYU, Gary Alexander and Myron Tucker of Arizona State and Dan Shelley of New Mexico.

PARALLEL BARS—The 1971 champion, Lee Wayman of Colorado State, is missing, but runnerup Jim Ivick of New Mexico and third placer Steve Zmora of Colorado State both return. Ken Holt of Arizona State has been a consistent threat. Wayne Young of BYU and Roger Haldeman of Utah must be considered.

HIGH BAR—The defending champion, John Atken of New Mexico, is back and must be favored, but he has been beset with injuries all year. Teammate Jim Ivick and Arizona State's Dick Dalton were second and third, respectively, last year.
